

Thousands of Free Worksheets On KidsKnowIt.com

T or F Geography

- T or F      The Atlantic Ocean stretches from the Arctic Ocean, downward to the shores of Antarctica.
- T or F      The Atlantic Ocean is bigger from the North to the South than the Pacific Ocean.
- T or F      From East to West, the Atlantic Ocean is only about half as wide as the Pacific.
- T or F      The Atlantic Ocean is a deep ocean, It is just slightly less than the Pacific Ocean. However, the Atlantic Ocean has fewer islands than the Pacific Ocean.
- T or F      The Indian Ocean lies between Africa on the West, Australia on the East, Asia on the North, and Antarctica on the South.
- T or F      10% of the Indian Ocean lies to the South of the Equator.
- T or F      The Arctic Ocean is much larger than the other oceans, as well as deeper.
- T or F      The Arctic Ocean is connected to the Pacific and Atlantic oceans via small gaps between continents.
- T or F      The Arctic is much colder than the other majority of the other oceans, with much of the water covered in a frozen ice cap.
- T or F      The ocean can extend down to depths of several miles, and there is a lot action down deep in the ocean where it is dark.
- T or F      Most of the action that happens in the oceans are after the first couple of hundred feet.
- T or F      Earth's oceans are believed to be basically the same below the first couple of hundred feet.
- T or F      Above this depth, where sunlight reaches, the traits found change dramatically from one location to another. temperature, turbulence, and salinity will all be changed.