

Thousands of Free Worksheets On KidsKnowIt.com

Secret Messages Answers for Geography

Pg 143

The Earth is constantly trying to balance temperature differences

Pg 144

On a global scale, massive jet streams transport air from one part of the globe to another

Pg 145

The oceans of the earth transfer heat from one location to another via massive ocean currents

Pg 146

The higher one travels into the troposphere, the lower the temperature becomes

Pg 147

The rate at which the temperature drops is known as the lapse rate

Pg 148

Atmospheric pressure is the amount of force or pressure exerted by the atmosphere on the objects located within it

Pg 149

Wind and temperature can have a substantial effect on the landscape

Pg 150

Everything around you is made up of tiny particles called molecules

Pg 151

In a solid object such as a rock, these molecules are bound tightly together